Stanley A. Piltz was a California photographer and publisher of Mid-Century Modern graphic design and printed ephemera. Stanley A. Piltz Company, San Francisco, issued many Linen Type postcards from the 1930s to the 1950s, depicting scenes of California, especially of the San Francisco Bay Area and the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition. They consisted primarily of scenic views, city, town, civil and military infrastructures and national monuments views. Linen Type postcards were produced on paper with a high rag content which gave the postcard a fabric type look and feel. At the time this was a less expensive process. Along with advances in printing technique, linen type cards allowed for very vibrant ink colors. Stanley Piltz pioneered the Linen Type postcards with his "Pictorial Wonderland Art Tone Series". Curt Teich was the most prominent and largest printer and publisher of Linen Type postcards, based in Chicago. Stanley Piltz was one of most prominent publisher at the West Coast. Curt Teich printed most of the Linen Type postcards for Piltz utilizing Teich's "C.T. Art-Colortone" printing method.

. [Colorado History]. CABINET CARD PHOTOGRAPH Of THREE YOUNG GIRLS, Presumed Native American. Rouse, Colo.: Silver State Photo Co., (n. p.). Ca 1890s?. Image: 4-13/16" x 3-7/8". Mount: 6-1/2" x 4-1/8". Now housed in an archival mylar sleeve. Some faint extremity stains, with one faint spot in the center of the image. About Very Good. [ID: 46644]

The town was named after S. F. Rouse of the Colorado Coal and Iron Company. This town was located six miles south of Walsenburg, Colorado, now a ghost town. In the town's vicinity was a coal mine, also named after Rouse, which was operated by Colorado Fuel and Iron. Rouse was the No. 4 mine of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. It opened in 1888 as the biggest coal mine in the state, and in 1889 was the leading producer in Huerfano County, averaging 70 rail cars a day.

Based on their appearance, the young ladies possibly Utes, known to have lived in southern portion of the state, though this pure speculation on our part..

As to Silver State Photo Co., no doubt this enterprising photographic firm took advantage of the economic boom that accompanied the working of the coal mine & offered the expanded community their services. That said, we find no contemporary record of the firm, apparently now having faded to oblivion.

This 4 page leaflet provides the party platform for the "1856 Democratic National Convention, which was the seventh political convention of the United States Democratic Party. Held from June 2 to June 6, 1856, prior to the November elections, at Smith & Nixon's Hall in Cincinnati, on the Ohio River in Ohio, it was the first national party nominating convention outside the "Original Thirteen States". The party nominated James Buchanan, U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain, for President (denying re-nomination to incumbent President Franklin Pierce), and former Representative John C. Breckinridge of Kentucky for Vice President.

The Buchanan-Breckinridge ticket went on to win the 1856 presidential election, defeating John C. Fremont with William L. Dayton from the new Republican Party, and a strong third party showing from the American Party of the 'Know Nothings' represented by former President Millard Fillmore and Andrew J. Donelson." Holcomb, born and raised in Ohio, in the early 20s made his way by painting houses, followed by moving to York and becoming a card printer. This evolved into a successful "novelty" business, producing school toys, music instruments and divers supplies for children. He also became well known for publishing a widely-read school journal, The Teacher's Guide. In 1878, Holcomb invented & patented this amplifying acoustic telephone, which, as the circular notes, "positively do not infringe on anyone's rights" i.e., Bell. The device, which was advertised to "work excellently on two mile lines," proved quite popular, selling over 10,000, "$10.00 per set." [cf. History of Medina County, 1881, p. 736].

Cook County Hospital, now The John H. Stroger Jr. Hospital of Cook County, was/is a public hospital in Chicago, Illinois. The hospital, which "opened 1857, was used as a teaching hospital by Rush Medical School until the Civil War, when it was transitioned to an army hospital. After the war, it continued its purpose as a center for medical education and founded the first medical internship in the country in 1866. By the 1900s, the hospital was overseen by surgeons and physicians in Chicago who volunteered their services at the facility, which was rebuilt in 1916. Regarded as one of the world's greatest teaching hospitals, many interns, residents, and graduate physicians came to see the medical and surgical advances. Innovations included the world's first blood bank and surgical fixation of fractures." [Wiki]

This volume of plates begins with an image of the hospital itself, scenes from the many wards therein [including one of an in-progress lower leg amputation], the ITS Graduating Class for 1890, Hospital staff, etc. Complete list of plates supplied on request.

Original publisher's purple cloth binding with gilt stamped title lettering to spine. Pale peach colored eps. General shelfwear. Spine cloth sunned. Period pos to preliminary blank. Very Good. [ID: 46285]

"Salome Lincoln Mowry was born in Raynham, Massachusetts, and joined its Free Will Baptist Church in 1823. She attended a religious meeting in 1827, to which the scheduled preacher was unable to come, so she delivered the sermon herself. Afterwards, despite some opposition, she continued preaching around Massachusetts and other parts of New England. She preached less often after her marriage to Elder Junia S. Mowry in 1835, and she died six year later following complications from the birth of their second child." She is perhaps most remembered for leading an 1829 walkout of weavers from Taunton when their wages were lowered by the owners. [Portraits of American Women in Religion].

. [African - American History]. Harding, Vincent [1931 - 2014] - A Show Narrator. NOTES On: BLACK HERITAGE - A History of Afro Americans. A Television Series Co-Sponsored by Columbia University and CBS January - April 1969. (n. p.): 1969. 100+ sheets of "The Plaza" [famous NYC hotel] letterhead, with mss notes recording key points/aspects of "Black Heritage" episodes, beginning with 7 January 1969. The holograph notes begin with the first episode on January 7th, and continue with elaborate details on 40+ other episodes, which comprise nearly half of the broadcast episodes. A typical day's notes fill 2 to 5 pages with the episode's key facts and themes being recorded. Letterhead: 10-1/2" x 7-1/4". All housed in a home-made portfolio, consisting of two cardboard covers, masking tape spine, title hand lettered to front cover. Masking tape spitting at bottom. Letterhead sheets have some age-toning. Overall, the lot: Very Good [if not slightly better]. [ID: 46076]

The archive documents this groundbreaking Afro-American series which aired in early 1969 [[perhaps initiated because of the earlier success of the CBS program, "Of Black America"?]. The show televised a series of lectures organized by a group of scholars and activists including Vincent Harding; the program was co-sponsored by Columbia University & CBS.

The series debuted on January 7th, 1969, running in the 9 a.m. time-slot, and was aired by the New York affiliate of CBS. After its 108 daily episodes were aired in the New York area, it went into syndication with dozens of CBS affiliates across the country starting in May of the same year. [included a May 17 review published by the Louisville KY Courier-Journal]. The show attracted national attention along with some controversy, as NAACP leader Roy Wilkins denounced it as "a plea for black separation." [A copy of Wilkins 25 January 1969 NY Post op-ed piece included].

Here then collected is a batch of extensive program notes, taken by an anonymous viewer, obviously with considerable interest in the subject. Given the proximity of the Plaza Hotel to CBS offices at 524 West 57th Street, the archive possibly compiled by an individual affiliated with the program.

Unknown is whether this diligent note-taker was a professor, critic, historian, or someone else perhaps associated with program, though their effort is now much appreciated 4 decades later, as the notes can help satisfy any historical interest in this late 1960s African-American television production. Further, the notes give hints as to what topics this viewer found important during any given show as it aired. Other than the Columbia University production archive, we find little other documentation available to those so interested.

. [Gay Literature]. GAY PEOPLE'S CHRONICLE. An Independent Chronicle of the Ohio Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender Community. Lot of 12 issues. Cleveland: KWIR Publications Inc., 1995 - 1997. 1st Printing. Divers paginations, ~ 32 - 36 pp. Illustrated from photographs & with the occasional drawing. 17" x 11-7/8". Printed self-wrappers. Age-toning. Horizontal folds. Signs of having been read. Overall, Very Good. [ID: 46964]

12 mid-1990's issues of the Cleveland-published newspaper documenting topics of interest to gay communities with a local view & perspective.

An off-shoot of the early Ohio gay press paper GEAR, the CHRONICLE was started in earnest in 1984 by a Case Western professor named Charles Callender. Generously illustrated with advertisements for Cleveland gay bars and businesses, classified ads, personals, etc., and as such, an important chronicle of the midwest gay lifestyle during the mid-1990s.

Containing the Routes of Travel by Steamboat, Stage and Canal; Together with Descriptions of, and Routes to, the Principal Places of Fashionable and Healthful Resort; with Other Valuable Information. Accompanied by an Entirely New and Authentic Map of the United States, Including California, Oregon, Etc., and a Map of the Island of Cuba. Philadelphia: Lippincott Grambo & Co., 1851. 1st edition (Clark III, 434; Graff 4687; New Howes W-487). iv, [5] - 216, [20] pp. Publisher catalogue last 20 pages. Fold-out map [24-3/4" x 29-1/2"] at rear, entitled "A New Map of the United States, upon which are Delineated its Vast Works of Internal Communication, Routes across the Continent &c. Showing also Canada and the Island of Cuba." Map hand-colored in outline. Scale: ~ 65 mi = 1". 4 insets, including one depicting California & Oregon. 12mo. 5-9/16" x 3-1/2". Original publisher's wallet-style purple leather binding, with gilt title stamping to one side. . Leather faded to dark tan. Old paper repair to top of rear hinge. Map with some age-toning along the two center horizontal fold-lines. Overall, a respectable VG+ copy. [ID: 36812]

While Howes categorizes this work as a derivative of Williams' earlier Appleton publication(s), the author, in his prefatory "To the Public", goes to great pains to reassure the reader this a new work, in which an "entirely new plan has been adopted.", a stance to which Clark & Graff agree. Further, research suggests, this the first Williams' publication to address California.

This 1851 map not recorded by Wheat, TRANSMISSIPPI, though see entry 769 for the 1852 version. Wheat tells us the map "is largely based on Fremont but which carries much up-to-date information ...".

Somewhat uncommon on the commercial market, with last copy to auction in 1999.
